

APPENDIX.

THE RATE OF THE WAGES OF THE GALLOGLAS AS THEY BE PAID IN MONEY AND VICTUALS, RATED AFTER THEIR OWN CONFESSION BEFORE SIR THOMAS CUSACK AND MR. SECRETARY.

At DUBLIN, 17^o Novembris, 1568.

APon conference had with the captens of the three septes of the Queens Majesties Galloglasses by Sir Thomas Cusacke, Knighte, and John Chaloner, her Majesties Secretarie in this realme, by the apoyntement of the Lorde Deputie, to witt and certifie what the wages and entreteynement of every sparre of her Majesties Galloglasses oughte to be of dutie ordinarilye in every place where the same is leviable: they have related as foloweth, videlicet,

That in every place where ther is to be levied an wholle quarters bonaghte vnto them, videlicet, for the wholle quarter of the yere they muste have of all places within Leymistre, Mounster or Vlster, for every sparre (which maketh two men)^a, by the name of the quarters wages v^s viij^d Irishe, and the dayly dietts halfe in money, videlicet, a penny sterling the meale for eche man, which for the wholle quarter amounteth vnto xl^s vi^d ob. Irish, and also the other halfe diettes in victuels, videlicet, for every sparr xv. peckes and a hoope of bredd corne^b for six score and two cakes of bred after the rate of halfe an hoope of corne for every cake, and also xvij. score and six quartes of butter vnto those cakes, after the rate of three quartes of butter to every cake, and v. quartes to a gallon.

And that in the Annaley and in Connaught where the wholle quarters bonaght is to be levied vnto them, they muste have for dietts halfe money and halfe dietts as afore-seid, but for the wages of every sparre more videlicet vij^s Irish.

But where their bonaght is for lesse then the quarter of a yere; there they muste have but the wages and dietts of money onely, and no victuells, that is to witt, wages

^a Every sparre (which maketh two men).—“Ten scor sparrs amounteth to twenty score men.” Report on Ireland, 1534.—State Papers, vol. ii. part iii. p. 185. In the vocabulary printed at the end of the State Papers, a Bataille, a Battallier, it is said, seems to have consisted of 60 or 80 galloglasses, but at page 115, vol. ii. part iii. the Earl of Kildare’s galloglasses consisted of but “sextene in a batayle.”

^b A hoope of bred corne.—This measure, which is not mentioned in Harris’s Ware, chap. xxxiii. must have contained a quarter of a peck.

as aforesaid, after the rate of the tyme; and dietts for the rate of the tyme only, after iiij^d sterling, per diem for every sparre and no more.

According to the which rates the Bonaghtes due and leviabie upon the Irishe Captenries and countreys by their enformacion conferred with the olde councill booke, so ferre furth as is there registred, and further by sighte of former warrants of their bonaghtes, the countrepaynes of captens indentures not yet perused amounte as on the other syde may appere.
